Archipenko, Picasso Of Sculpture, To Lecture, Teach Here In April

Alexander Archipenko, one of the world's great in contemporary sculpture, will arrive here early in April to give two public lectures and to conduct classes at the Carmel Art Institute. Founder of the modern school of sculpture, experimenter, innovator, inventor, he occupies the niche in contemporary sculpture that belongs to Picasso in painting.

Archipenko created a sensation in the art world with his first exhibition in Germany in 1910. It was at the Venetian Exhibition, 1920, that he was acknowledged "not only the phenomenon of the Twelfth Venetian Exhibition, he is a phenomenon himself, the most prominent and most discussed of all living artists." Today Archipenko is considered the greatest innovator in Sculpture since Michelangelo.

He was born in Kiev, in the Ukraine, in 1887, studied painting and sculpture in Kiev Art School and in L'Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris. Following the exhibition in Germany, he opened his own school in Paris, where he introduced into sculpture new aesthetic elements—the modeling of space, concave, transparencies. He also added the use of different materials to the field of sculpture. He made an extensive tour, exhibiting in many European cities. For several years he lived in Berlin, where he conducted a school.

It was after his arrival in New

Besides, it hurts the vegetables

In the current University of California clip sheet we read the headline, "Cause of Smog Damage to Vegetables Discovered."

So smog damages vegetables! Perhaps the Salinas lettuce growers and Castroville artichoke kings will cast an eye to the future and join the Carmel City Council in urging the county supervisors to consider seriously, not just "take under advisement" as they did at Monday's meeting, Carmel's suggestion that an anti-smoke ordinance be passed now, before Moss Landing becomes even more populous with smokestacks, and other parts of the county become similarly afflicted.

According to the findings of a combined project by the University of California Citrus Experimentation Station, California Institute of Technology and Los Angeles Air Pollution Control District, "Crops which are most damaged by smog are those in which the foliage is the salable portion of the plants, such as spinach, lettuce and alfalfa. Dehydration or scorching of leaves is the principle injury."

The guilty element in the smog is unsaturated hydrocarbons, they found, source of which is petroleum, used as a fuel in many industrial processes. They are also other chemicals in smog that cause leaf damage.

In view of this information, the Chambers of Commerce throughout the county who might oppose a smog ordinance, fearing it would drive away prospective new industries, might decide that it is more important to protect what they already have, their great going agricultural industries of the Salinas Valley —Wilma Cook.

Gus Weiser Destroys Ammunition Train In North Korea

Major Gus Weiser, son-in-law of former Carmel Police Chief Roy Fraites, has been credited with the destruction of a North Korean ammunition train, according to a dispatch from Far East Air Forces Headquarters.

He was flying a routine road patrol mission in a B-26 Invader, a light bomber, north of Wonsan when he spotted a red glow. He went down to investigate, and as he leveled out, he could see that the red glow came from the firebox of a train that was pulling five box cars.

Major Weiser banked the B-26 around and made a pass, dropping one napalm bomb. The napalm passed over the engine and hit a bridge ahead of it. The railroad crew left the train stalled on the bridge, jumping from it for cover. On the second pass, Major Weiser came in from the opposite direction, barely clearing the smoke stack, and dropped his napalm on the box cars.

"Everything broke loose at once, the B-26 was rocked by the blast and I thought we had been hit," said Weiser. "Looking back I could see the explosion reaching above the aircraft."

The hot target was a Communist ammunition train.

Two more passes at a higher altitude were made and bombs were dropped on the engine to complete the job.

Major Weiser prepared for his Korean assignment as early as January, 1942, when he joined the Aviation Cadets. He received his commission in September, 1942. Early in 1944 he went overseas to England where he flew 65 missions

Old Timers' Show Great Event For Carmel

One of the most significant shows in the history of the Gallery has opened this week at the Art Association headquarters on Dolores Street. The Old Timers' Show includes artists who were active here before 1920. Their names and paintings are legend in this area and glow with the spirit that has made history here and this area so famous as the artists' own. Some of them are gone from us and are now no doubt painting "thousand league canvases with brushes of comets hair" but their paintings and what they stood for have become cherished tradition. Not all of them were members of the Art Association, but their activity and comradship evolved its eventual existence.

It is with a most uncritical eye that one looks at these paintings. One is disposed to love them all for what they stand for here. But the most exacting critic need not strain any points to acknowledge the master's touch of Charles Rollo Peters. Here is one who has stood the test of time and who is now a darling of the connoisseurs. His paintings, moonlit and mysterious, on close examination reveal a virtuosity and amazing command of the medium that fully justify his place in history. The bottomless glazed shadows, the shimmering starlit surfaces, owe their most efective beauty to a control that made every touch, every brush-

PADRE HORSEHIDERS OPEN LEAGUE PLAY AT KING CITY

With retention of their B division championship as the primary objective, 16 Carmel High School varsity baseball players make the long trek to King City this afternoon in quest of a winning 1951 debut. Well-sprinkled with veterans from last year's championship aggregation, the 1951 edition should make all the schools hustle before they let loose of the championship. Good middle strength in catcher Canham, pitcher Overin, shortstop Updike, and centerfielder Reimers provides the red and gray entry a sound nucleus for a good nine. Bill Daniels, a power-hitting outfielder, and Stu Emery are other holdovers from last season. Seasoned from plenty of action with the JVs and lots of softball experience, Mike Ricketts, Bob Laugenour, Myron Branson, Skipper Lloyd, and Tommy Brosnan will prove to be valuable hands on the varsity. Syl Burger, Craig Moore, and Art Schurman are new hands to baseball competition but have shown plenty of promise in recent workouts. Don Leidig, a freshman hurler, looked the part of a winner against the Monterey Junior College, showing lots of poise in the three innings he worked. Look for this lad to be a winner in CCAL diamond ranks.

BYRNE'S TRACK TEAMS OPEN SEASON AT GONZALES

Carmel High School's track and field artists invade Spartan Field tomorrow afternoon to match speed and agility with the Gonzales thinclads. Coach Byrne's 1951 tracksters are pretty much untested but some surprises could emerge from tomorrow's struggle. Topped by Frans Doelman, a tested competitor from last year's squad, the Padre varsity has 15 candidates vieing for points. In the hurdles will be Doelman, Ted Brand, Bill White, and Don Canham, sprints, Gene McFarland, probably the top sprinter in the league, Syl Burger, Jim Moran, Henry Overin, and Pablo Palick, distance races, Jim Thompson and Hans Doelman, field events, Overin and Doelman, high jump, Updike and Jones, shot put, Reimers and Turney, discus, Moran and Brand, broad jump, Burger, pole vault. Gerald McDonald, an up and coming 880-man, should pick up some points in the middle distance race.

Byrne's lightweight squad could be the surprise package of the league. Packing plenty of punch with Jerry Colman, Lou Jaramillo, Myron Branson, and Art Schurman in the sprints, the Padre Babes are a well-rounded aggregation.

UPDIKE, OVERIN, CANHAM LEAD JUNIORS TO INTERCLASS TRACK TITLE

Scoring 35 points between them, Bob Updike, Henry Overin, and Don Canham led a confident Junior Class to the 1951 interclass track championship last Thursday afternoon at the Padre oval. Canham won both sprints and anchored the winning relay team, Overin took second in the 220, high jump, and broad jump, while Updike won the shot put, ran third in the 120-yard hurdles, and leaped to third place in the high jump. The Juniors accumulated 59 points to 52 for the runner-up Seniors. The Sophomores gathered in 14 points, but the little Freshmen were goose-egged. Frans Doelman's 15 points topped the Senior scorers and made the lanky distance star the high-scorer of the meet. Frans won the low and high hurdles and hopped a good 5-6 to win the high jump.

A talent-laden bunch of Sophomore lightweights ran off and hid from the rest of the opposition in the limited class. The second-year lads notched 47 points to 39 for the Seniors and 38 for the Juniors. The Freshmen gathered in 11 markers on the good work of broad jumper Gottfried, hurdler Hilgers, and distance runner Redding. Art Schurman, Jerry Colman, and Don Morehead showed the way for the Sophomore scorers. Jerry won the 75-yard dash, 120-yard low hurdles, and shot put, while Schurman won the 330-yard dash, took third in the 120-yard low hurdles, fourth in the shot put. Don won the 660-yard run, was second in the shot put and took thirds in the 120-yard low hurdles and broad jump. Best performance for lightweight tracksters was Leroy Spencer's 3:44 effort in the 1,320-yard run. This lad will make the B division distance runners get up and go in all the meets this year. John Gottfried won the broad jump for the Freshmen to give the first year class a start on the 11 points accumulated.

Eighth grade students competed as lightweights for the Senior class and showed considerable promise in all their efforts. Dean Phillips won the pole vault with Gary Appleton finishing second. Paul Yementes ran third in the 150 and 330-yard dashes.

Leroy Spencer, Ken Barker, Don Morehead, and Del Redding will take care of the distance races, Mike Ricketts, Bill Gorham, Dick Hilgers, and Jerry Colman in the hurdles, John King and Lou Jaramillo, high jump, von Meier, discus, Colman, pole vault, Branson and Morehead, shot put. A good 440 relay team of Coleman, Jaramillo, Schurman, Branson should provide a good meet-clincher for the Padrecitos.

Saturday's meet at Gonzales is slated to get underway at 1:30.

DEL MONTE CRICKET CLUB LOOKING FOR RECRUITS; FIRST PRACTISE APRIL 1

The Del Monte Cricket Club, which organized here in 1940, is in dire need of new recruits if they are going to go on playing. They have lost some of their best men recently, and have only 8 left on the team. A cricket team consists of 11, and they hope to get about 15 more men so as to allow for alternates.

George Calvert, the captain, recently left for San Francisco. Tommy Kent has gone down to Santa Maria where he is radio-announcing. John Tyler has gone to San Francisco where he is paying cricket for the Olympic Club. And Eric Petri, the leading batsman, has had to give it up on account of arthritis.

The popular English game which seems to be sweeping the country lately was first played on the Monterey Peninsula in 1940 when Hollywood played Del Monte. Sir Aubrey Smith, who has since retired from the cricket field, was with the Hollywood team.

The local team plays now in Carmel rather than at Del Monte although it still calls itself the Del Monte Cricket Club. It has its practise at Bardarson Field. They play the Olympic Club in San Francisco, the Golden Gate Club from Oakland, the Marin County Club of Marin, and two colored teams, the Californians and the Surrey Club. The latter are composed of West Indian negros, both first and second generation.

If the team gets large enough and good enough this year they are hoping to play Hollywood again.

They also have a cup-competition continuously during the season, which is a kind of round-robin. At the end of a month of play they have a play-off; then the next month the remaining teams play. At the end of the season, the two finalists play.

George Dear, who is recovering from jungle-fever which he contracted in Singapore, is captain of the Cricket Club this year, and anyone who wishes to join may get in touch with Alec Merivale, 7-4680.

It is hoped that at least 3 or 4 experienced players can be persuaded to join, and that another 10 or 11 who would like to learn the game can be recruited.

The first practise will be at Bardarson Field April 1 at 2 p.m.

BAY LEAGUE SOFTBALL MEET SLATED FOR CASTROVILLE

A meeting for managers and sponsors of Monterey Bay Intercity Softball teams is scheduled for next Tuesday night at the Franco Hotel, Castroville. Plans for the coming season will be formulated and new teams wishing to enter the league will be given consideration. The Bay League was a six-team circuit last season, but league directors hope to add two additional clubs this year. Carmel was represented by two teams in the 1950 league, The Pine Cone and Wilder & Jones. Other teams in the league came from Watsonville, Castroville, and Monterey.

Interested Class A softball managers are invited to attend Tuesday night's meeting which is set for 8 o'clock at the Franco Hotel, Castroville.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Watch Out For The "Blind-Spots"

Stopped by Squint Miller's farm the other day and saw a vinegar bottle in his kitchen with an oversized cucumber inside it. The cucumber filled the whole bottle.

"What's a cucumber doing in there?" I asked him. "That's my 'blind-spot' reminder," says Squint. "My grandmother kept one in her kitchen to remind her to take stock of herself now and then.

"I slipped that bottle over the cucumber when it was just starting to grow on the vine," he went on. "And like certain viewpoints, not noticed, it just grew and grew—now it's there to stay."

From where I sit, we could take a cue from Squint and watch for our own "blind-spots" and prejudices before they grow too big to get rid of. We've got to respect our neighbor's right to his preferences ... preferences for a certain make of car, a favorite movie star, or a temperate glass of beer after work. We won't be tripped by any blind spots if we keep our eyes—and minds—open!

School Board Learns Of Liability In Case Of Earthquake Damage

The Carmel Unified School District Board learned at its meeting Tuesday night that the members would be personally liable if injury or death occurred at Sunset School as a result of earthquake damage.

The voters, in 1934, turned down a $20,000 bond issue to finance structural changes that would have fulfilled the state requirements for earthquake proof school buildings. This election cleared the board of liability at that time.

A change in the state law in 1942 provided for an election in which the voters would have three propositions to vote on in choosing means of financing earthquake proofing, a bond election, a raise in tax rate, or providing temporary shelters. Since the board has not called such an election, the members are again personally liable because it is their responsibility to bring the matter before the voters, according to a ruling by District Attorney Burr Scott and reported to the board Tuesday night by Superintendent Stuart Mitchell.

The members have decided to negotiate with an engineer to go over the original engineer's report made in 1933 on the structural changes and improvements that would be required and what the cost would be under present conditions. They also voted to double the insurance now carried on buildings at Sunset.

Floyd W. Hunter, Jr., son of Col. and Mrs. Floyd Hunter (U. S. Army, Ret.) of Robles Del Rio, was recently promoted to the rank of permanent major, it was learned from United States Air Force Headquarters last week.

Major Hunter attended the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis and later Oregon State College at Corvallis, Oregon, prior to his entrance into the flying cadets in 1941.

His present assignment is Director of Personnel for the 1704th Air Transport Group, MATS, at Travis Airforce Base.

Votes of thanks were given Lloyd Weer for organizing the entertainment, Mark Raggett and Oscar Balzer who ran the Fashion Show.

Program for Tuesday's meeting consisted of Lew Cramer's sax and Mayor Allen Knight's piano beating out hot licks in accompanyment to community singing of such up to the minute numbers as, She Was Only A Bird In A Gilded Cage, and My Mother Was A Lady.

Welcomed back into the club was former member Tom Branson.

Red Cross Mobile Unit Will Be In Monterey, March 22

The Red Cross Mobile Unit will be at the U. S. O. Building on El Estero in Monterey Thursday, March 22, and it is hoped that as many donors will contribute blood as possible. Two hundred pints are needed this month.

Civilian donors gave 185 pints last month, but because of the flu epidemic rejections amounted to 25% instead of the usual 10%. Men at the Army Language School gave 236 pints, and 293 pints were given by men at Fort Ord.

Donors are urged to make reservations in advance by calling 7-6921. The number of beds and equipment sent from San Jose depends on the number of people signed up in advance.

During the past month, 63 pints were used in Carmel and Monterey hospitals which had been given free of charge for emergency cases by the Red Cross, according to their usual policy. The remainder of the blood given by local donors was flown to Korea.

The Red Cross has received urgent requests for more Type O blood for Korea during the past month, and people having this type of blood are especially urged to sign up.

Old Timers' Show Great Event For Carmel

stroke, signficant and indispensible. We recommend Charles Rollo Peters to the modern expressionist blot and splash school that makes a fetish of paint quality.

Then there is Francis McComas' Tahitian Seascape—a fresh and vital and modern as though it were painted yesterday. And there is a small C. S. Price to whom all honor came late in life. He died not long ago, knowing he would take his place among the immortals—a sort of Albert Pinkham Ryder of the West. The Portland Museum of Art is even now cataloguing all his works and preparing a great retrospective show of them.

August Gay's figure painting recalls to mind this beloved personality. A colorist who can easily rank as such with the great post-impressionists with whom he worked in Paris, he lived so quietly and modestly here that his gentle brilliance was realized only by his friends. This was recognition enough for him, but it is credible that his paintings, based on an architecture of composition and an orchestration of color in the classic tradition that never dies, may secure him a corresponding immortality.

There are many works that show the bild pigmentation and au premier coup technique of the Munich School that flourished so grandly in its hey-day and has probably been the greatest influence of all on American painting, nothwithstanding our legions of Cezanne, Paul Klee and Picasso devotees. The emphasis of the Munich School on style was so powerfully persuasive and so easy to take from the elegant William Chase that the American tendency is still to reduce even the classic masters to a style and to miss the revelation of form that makes style a mere by product.

There is a large, dramatic Armin Hansen and also a small, flowing pannel by him, and several Chapel Judsons that recall the carefree Paris days earlier in the century. There is an I. Maynard Curtis and an Evelyn McCormick of Colton Hall. George Siedeneck's canvases make everyone exclaim, "Why doesn't he show more often!" And George Koch presented a scene of Vermont. There is a fine large Arthur Hill Gilbert and several M. de Neale Morgans.

Cornelius and Jessie Bothe show paintings in their emollient, decorative style, and Josephine Blanch's Two Boats recalls the good old days of the old Hotel del Monte Gallery. William Silva, Josephine Culbertson, Willam Watts, William Adams, Myron Oliver, William Ritschel, Ferdinand Burgdorff, Percy Gray, J. K. Oliver, Sidney Yard, Rem Remsen, John O'Shea and Lester Boronda complete the roster, and each contributes a unique and requisite addition to this show that is history.

The Old Timers Exhibition will continue until the end of the month, when The Carmel Pine Cone will bring out its anniversary issue honoring old Carmel. The exhibition was, in fact, instigated by The Pine Cone's plans to feature our historical background. A reception at the Art Association Gallery is being planned while the show is on and will be announced later.—Patricia Cunningham.

York, in 1923, and the opening of his school there, that he invented movable painting, known as Archipentura.

He has been an American citizen since 1928. Since then he has taught and exhibited throughout the country.

In 1948 he opened his seventy-eighth one-man exhibition in the New York Galleries of the Associated American Artists, featuring his new invention in sculpture—that of modeling light (carved plastic). Currently he has an exhibition touring in the southern cities of the United States.

Besides having his own school in New York, he teaches as visiting professor in colleges and universities throughout the country. Until April 1, he is the William-Ames Professor of Art at the University of Washington. On his way to Carmel he will give a series of lectures, including one at the Portland Art Museum. While in Carmel he will deliver two public lectures, the dates to be announced later. At the Carmel Art Institute he will give a two weeks' course in drawing, painting and sculpture from 1:30 to 4:30 in the afternoons. A number of artists have already reserved their places, as the group is limited.

As John Cunningham says, "It is a rare opportunity for local artists to get in a short period of two weeks the results of a lifetime of invention, knowledge and philosophy of one of the great men of our time."

It is also a rare opportunity for the layman, through the public lectures, to get an insight into the puzzling aspects of modern sculpture.

New Faces In Cast For Wharf Theatre's "Light Up The Sky"

The Forest Theater Guild's next production of Moss Hart's amusing comedy of theatrical personages, Light Up the Sky, will be produced at the Wharf Theater in Monterey opening at 8:30 on April 6. There are several new-comers in the cast making their debut in Peninsula theatricals but their background of experience in other little theater groups qualifies them exceptionally well for the parts they portray in this gay and sparkling show.

Peggy Cease, who is taking the leading feminine role, and Don Gunderson, one of the prominent male parts, are welcome new faces to play with such well known local actors as Charles Kilian, Leslie Somers, Betty Fowlston, Alex Merivale and Jane Prosser, while Dr. Hartley G. Dewey and his son Bryce are also making their first appearance here in supporting roles.

The play is directed by Cole Weston who did such an admirable job of Winterset, and the production is under the management of Alex Merivale. Mrs. Hartley G. Dewey is designing the sets, and Hazel McLellan is in charge of costumes. Stage managers are Bryce Dewey and Jane Prosser.

Light Up the Sky will be the second production to be shown at the newly re-organized Wharf Theater, and will follow the present showing of the smash hit Cradle Snatchers currently playing. Light Up the Sky will run on the following dates, April 6, 7 and 8; April 13, 14 and 15; April 20, 21 and 22; April 27, 28 and closing on April 29.

Carmel R.F.D. Up For Civil Service Examination, April 5

There will be a civil service examination for Carmel rural mail carrers, April 5. Since Len Pitman retired November 1, there have been three rural carriers. During the Christmas season rush, Clay Otto and Maurice Stoney joined up forces to cover the route. After the holidays, Gerald Basic took over as a regular substitute.

Anyone wishing information on the examination may get in touch with Fred Strong at the Carmel Post Office. Pay starts at $2,758 a year for a 30-mile route with an additional $20 a year for each mile over. Carmel R.F.D. is 36 miles. There is also a car allowance of 8 cents a mile.

ST. JOHN'S CHAPEL

There will be two services on Palm Sunday in St. John's Chapel, Del Monte, at 8 a.m. and 11 a.m. Palm crosses will be blessed and distributed at each of these services. At 11:00 there will be a procession of the palms and St. Theodulph's Hymn, written for this service nearly a thousand years ago, will be sung. The Rev. Theodore Bell will preach at the service.

The service on Good Friday will commence at 1:30 and will be finished before 3 p.m. The rector will read the story of Our Lord's passion and will preach on The Mystery of the Cross.

Since Holy Saturday is the traditional day for Christian baptism, those who have unbaptised children, or adults seeking baptism, are requested to get in touch with the rector as soon as possible.

On Easter Day there will be identical services at 9:30 a.m. and at 11:15 a.m. There will also be a celebration of the Holy Communion at 8 a.m.

Appreciative Capacity Crowd Hears Pasquier Trio Concert

By K. V. Ruster

In probably one of the most varied of chamber music programs, the Pasquier Trio played brilliantly to a vastly appreciative audience last Monday night at the Carmel Hill Theatre. The three Pasquier brothers, Jean (violin), Pierrre (viola) and Etienne (cello), chose as their opening number Three Trios, Opus 32 by Haydn. There is a charming viola and violin duet in the last trio, and though the cello does not shine, perhaps, greatly in this piece, he gets full play in the ensuing Beethoven Trio in C Minor, Opus 9, No. 3. The first movement, Allegro con spirito, is just that. The adagio con espressione has syncopated runs, is extremely difficult with its long sustained notes and phrases. The scherzo is lively and exacting, and the finale is light, musically gentle with its ending. After an intermission, punctuated with enthusiastic chat and coffee in the theater's delightful little foyer, the brothers Pasquier returned to introduce the Martinu Trio, dedicated especially to them. Bohuslav Martinu is now in this country teaching at Princeton, I believe. He is a native of Czechoslovakia and one of the most popular composers in Europe now. Serge Koussevitsky introduced him to us in this country with the Boston Symphony as early as 1927. The American ear, long accustomed to the dissonances of Bela Bartok, Hindemith and Milhaud, finds this fast-paced musical saga, nevertheless, one of anguish, often of violence. It is an extremely difficult work, and one which in all fairness should be listened to at least three or four times before rendering an opinion. Sitting in the darkness among a group of attentive musicians and music-lovers, a first impression of this Martinu opus is interesting but not conclusive. I found it impressive, retaining the feeling that three distraught spirits were lamenting each his own individual misery, occasionally wailing in unison. I should like to hear it again.

The concluding work on the program is by Jean Francaix, a modern composer best known in this country for his Concertino For Piano And Orchestra, some of whose moods are recalled most happily in this Trio dedicated especially to the Pasquiers. It is somewhat startling to find this sort of thing played by chamber music groups, a completely antithesis of the stately classic Haydn, Beethoven, Mozart school. But its four movements are beautifully played, each one a separate and flawless performance, united by a rondo vivo finale which left the audience vociferous in its applause and cries of "Bravo!" and "Encore!" An allegro vivo introduces a cello pizzicato which approaches pure jazz beat, a fast-paced and delightful thing. The scherzo vivo brings forth a fascinating assortment of rhythms and counterpoint. The third movement is an andante which is pure, lovely, almost elegiac in its sweetness and sadness, the sort of music a sensitive composer might choose for a dream sequence in one of the better films. And the aforementioned rondo vivo gathers up the strains and tempi of the first three movements, the pizzicato counterpoint, the jog rhythm, and the jazz-like section spiced with an occasional andante theme. It is as though a Western Operetta like Rodeo had been scored musically by a Frenchman instead of an American. And most successfully.

After a prolonged burst of applause, the Pasquiers gave an encore which returned the audience to the classical mood of the earlier part of the evening. It was the familiar and stately Second Minuet of the Divertimento in D Flat by Mozart, charmingly light, pleasurably received.

The Hill Theater, it is to be hoped, will more often be the setting for such evenings, since it is well suited for this type of music, and accoustically perfect. And the Peninsula is grateful to Lee Crowe and the others who make such programs available to us.

Cooper Club Plans Ship And Shore Field Trips April 20

The Cooper Orinthological Club will have its annual meeting April 20 in the Class Hall at Asilomar. Officers will be elected for the coming year, and there will be a two-day session of reading scientific papers followed by a field-trip. The field-trip will be divided into two sections, one along the coast by car, the other in a boat so that they can see off-shore birds.

Local members planning to attend the meeting are Charles Anderson, Laidlaw Williams and Wilma Cook.

Originally annual meetings were held either in Berkeley or Los Angeles, but it was decided to meet half-way and Asilomar was fixed upon as the site.

Small and large printing orders are quickly filled at The Pine Cone Press, Dial Carmel 7-3881.

Lili Kraus To Play Here In Music Society Concert

The Carmel Music Society will present its fifth event of the season at Sunset Auditorium Tuesday evening, March 27, when Lili Kraus will be at the piano. Madame Kraus was scheduled to play here nine years ago, but on her world tour she was detained by the Japanese in Java and released only at the end of the war.

Lili Kraus began her musical studies at the age of 6 and within two years was admitted as a regular student at the Royal Academy of Music in Budapest. Before she was out of her teens she was appointed Professor of Piano at the Vienna Conservatory, and shortly afterward she began her concert career. Such distinguished teachers as Arthur Schnabel and Bela Bartok have been proud to assist in her training.

She has been soloist with the symphony orchestras of London, Glasgow, Edinburgh, Paris, Rome, Stockholm, Copenhagen as well as in Vienna and Budapest. One of her great successes occurred during the Mozart Festival at Salzburg in 1934, when American tourists had their first taste of her talents. Since then her recordings have been widely popular here. She is the recognized interpreter of Haydn, Mozart, Schubert, Beethoven, Bartok and Stravinsky.

The directors of the Carmel Music Society consider this concert the richest opportunity of the whole rich season for music lovers here.

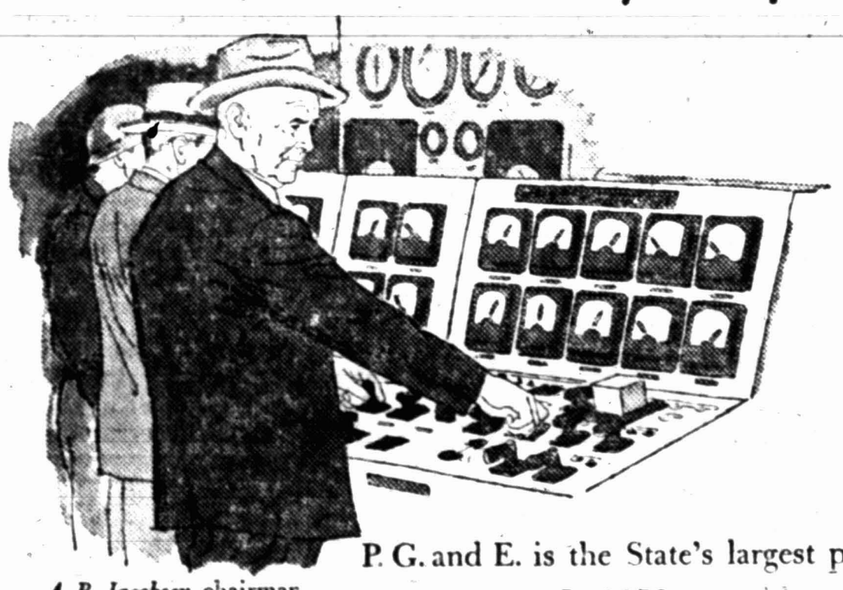
$150,000 taxes daily for your well-being



A. B. Jacobsen, chairman of the Monterey County Board of Supervisors, says the Company's new Moss Landing Steam Plant "will contribute more revenue in local taxes than any other single industrial development in the history of Monterey County."

P. G. and E. is the State's largest property taxpayer. In 1950 we paid over 27 million dollars in local taxes. Federal and state taxes brought our total taxes to almost 55 million dollars! That's better than $150,000 a day.

A business-managed utility produces taxes instead of consuming them. This tax revenue would have to be obtained from other sources if our business were publicly owned and tax exempt.

Bill Toa, is shift foreman of our new 670,000 hp Contra Costa Steam Plant, which represents an investment of $80,000,000. P. G. and E. already is the largest property taxpayer in the county—over $1,850,000 last year. The new plant will boost local tax revenues even higher.

J. F. Nielsen, Redding car dealer, says: "Local businessmen benefit directly from P. G. and E.'s annual payroll of $1,640,000 in Shasta Division, and all of us benefit from the Company's taxes of more than $1,700,000—almost half of all property taxes collected in our county."

Charles H. Aikins, Superintendent of Schools, Amador County, knows the value to his community of P. G. and E.'s property taxes. For, of the total property taxes collected by Amador County last year for its 21 schools, 58% or $209,176 was paid by P. G. and E.

POINT LOBOS RESERVE

The mallows, the family to which the checkerbloom belongs, are second cousins to the buttercups. Indeed, upon close examination, one can readily see the resemblance.

The name, wild hollyhock, as this flower is often called, is fairly descriptive, and not far astray, since hollyhocks, athough of a different genus, are still of the same family.

Wild hollyhock, as a name for this flower, is acceptable to some people, but it is rather broad in that it could mean most any of the mallows, so if one wishes to be specific, to pin the plant down, checkerbloom is the accepted common name.

Checkerbloom is found as far north as Washington, and eastward to Wyoming and Texas, forming an attractive feature of grassy hills and meadows, in spring and early summer, sometimes 'til late summer in this area.

Here in Point Lobos Reserve, one can find the flower in the grassy meadows, in many cases near enough to the road to be visable from one's car, being easily recognized by those who are familiar with hollyhocks.

Where grass is short or sparse, the plant lies more or less flat on the ground, in the manner of a crawler, the slender rather hairy stem rising gracefully from basal clusters of geranium-like leaves.

These stems, ranging from four to 18 inches in length, usually have several flowers growing from them. In taller grass, this slender stem, instead of lying flat, will rise more or less straight up, seeking the sun, and supported in its vertical position by the grass itself.

The flower is usually of a rose-lavender color, five petalled and cupped. The petals in the mature flower are usually about one inch in length, tapering toward the calyx to a wedge shape, and resembling to some degree, the hollyhocks of many home flower gardens.

Another flower of the same family (Malvacea), with which many are familiar, is the mission mallow.

This plant was planted extensively in the missions by the Franciscan monks, and is now plentiful and up and down the coast of California.

The mission mallow is very hardy in that it is often found in the ravines and gullies of bold headlands, where it braves the salt spray. For this reason, it has been cultivated quite extensively, being used as a wind break for gardens near the sea.

The Time Has Come .

By Kippy Stuart

One day this past week, I was lunching at one of Carmel's more intimate restaurants, where strangers are seated together at cozy little tables. I accepted a seat with two ladies and started to mind my own business. This is a behavior pattern I can usually swing without any difficulty . . . minding my own business, I mean, but in this instance I "came" a cropper and in a big way.

I was ruminating and pondering in my own world of gardens; what to do with this ailing shrub, what to do with that ailing gardener who was allowing the new garden that had just been installed, to go hence and never come back.

Gradually, into my pre-occupied mind stole part of the conversation going on at my side. One lady was saying to the other:

"Well, my dear I could have killed that gardener. He didn't know beans about anything and he cut the top right off my lovely shrub . . ."

Her vis-a-vis replied, "It is terrible the way we put in lovely gardens and then some man comes along who says he is a gardener"

"Oh, I know what you mean. I wish I knew what to do with this particular bush the man whacked off at the top."

Silently, I was right in there pitching. Oh dear. If only I knew what shrub that gardener had chopped off! The pruning couldn't hurt a Eugenia, or a Pittosporum, or even an English laurel. But suppose that gardener (who said he was a gardener), had mutilated one of the costly ornamentals,—a Yewe, or any other species that is supposed to function and grow into a perfectly symmetrical pyramidal shape? The conversation came to a dead stop, and there was I suspended in mid air with a shrub in my hand that needed a helping hand." I sighed and went back to my ruminating. All of a sudden I nearly jumped out of my chair for the first lady was now saying to the second lady,

"I read in The Pine Cone last week an article about daphne. The woman said she couldn't raise daphne."

"Yes, lots of these writers don't know what they are talking about. I bet that dame doesn't know beans about gardening. If she did know about gardening she would be out there digging the dirt and not airing her supposed knowledge in headlines. Pooh! You know that I can raise daphne."

The second lady joined in. "Sure . . . sure . . . you've got a whole hedge of daphne. Why don't you write a letter and tell her off? Tell her how easy you can get daphne to grow and what superior blooms you get from your hedge?"

A spark of interest grew in the first lady's eyes. "That's an idea, but what's the use. She would have some alibi. Professional gardeners don't want to be told; all they want to do is spout their supposed erudition."

I was pretty flattened out by this time, but I held my fire. I was sincerely interested and oh, how I wanted to know just what the lady did to make a whole hedge of daphne grow. The conversation at my side wavered off into Beauty Parlors and canasta and there I sat with one silent question in my heart and maybe in my eyes, . . . or maybe by mental telepathy I forced the second lady to ask casually, "By the way, how do you raise your daphne?"

A surprised look was the reply. "Why I don't know. I never do anything. I don't know what makes the thing grow."

"Don't you ever give it any care?"

"Why should I? The thing is doing perfectly well by itself." They rose from the table and sauntered toward the door.

The moral of this tale I believe to be: "Ignorance is as good as anything else when it comes to gardening."

Milford Tells PTA Special Needs Of Jr. High Student

Mr. Stanley Milford, Principal of the Washington Junior High School in Salinas in a talk to the P.T.A. in the cafeteria of Sunset School Tuesday night emphasized the age-characteristics of the junior high school student, with reference to the growth pattern, outlining what parents may expect of their children at this rapidly growing stage with its dramatic changes.

Girls, he stressed, are ahead of the boys for awhile in scholarship as well in terms of social interest, but the boys suddenly catch up. This necessitates a junior high-school program taking care of their special needs.

The boys interests are mainly objective, he explained, with emphasis on sports, shop, etc. It is an exploratory period for them. The girls of this age have an opportunity in the junior high-school program for learning about homemaking, art and music, and boys for shop work as well as trying out new activities such as journalism.

In other words, the junior high-school program, unlike the old-fashioned grammar school, is designed to fit special needs of a rapidly growing and changing group of young people who are meeting the problems of adolescence.

Following Mr. Milford's talk, refreshments were served by Mrs. Jack Dalziel, Mrs. William Potter and Mrs. Fred Nelson.

Stewart Mitchell, School Superintendent here, was responsible for Mr. Milford's presence, as he felt it was important to acquaint the parents of the community with the junior high-school program.

"Will You Allow This?"

Fifteen conservation groups you are familiar with all of them and are probably a member of several (Audubon Society, Wilderness Society, Sierra Club, Garden Club of America, etc.) have banded together to sponsor a pamphlet that arrived at my desk early this week. They tell us that the threatened encroachment of the Dam Builders in Dinosaur National Monument is no longer a distant bugaboo. It's here.

This beauty spot belongs to us, all of us, all over the nation, yet it is being sacrificed to the shortsightedness and cupidity of a handful of people in the Upper Colorado River region.

Here is what our conservation organizations have to say and what they want you to do.

"You are being asked, through your representatives in Congress, to allow the Bureau of Reclamation to build dams in our national park system.

"Will you allow this?

"Or will you join with other conservation-minded, public-spirited citizens to protect our national park heritage against this dam-building invasion that now threatens?

"We are now facing—immediately—a controversy over very specific dam proposals in the Dinosaur National Monument's magnificent Yampa and Green River canyons in northwestern Colorado and northeastern Utah. The Secretary of the Interior, himself, has already added his support to the Bureau of Reclamation proposal. Bills to authorize the proposal have been introduced in Congress.

"If dams are permitted in this unit of the national park system, other areas will then be in grave jeopardy also. Threatened right now, in fact, are Glacier, Grand Canyon, Kings Canyon, and Mammoth Cave National Parks.

"On the other hand, if the people of America now turn back this threatened invasion, by reaffirming in Congress the sanctity of the areas that the Nation has dedicated for preservation, the whole national system of parks, monuments, wilderness, wild, primitive, and roadless areas can be safeguarded more surely than ever before.

"This is a test case. The issue we now face marks a crisis in the whole history of wilderness preservation in the United States. It concerns all of us.

"Our national park system preserves the outstanding scenic resources of our wild unspoiled America . . .

"The American people through Congress, have clearly expressed their will that these superbly precious parts of our native landscape should be preserved, unimpaired, unchanged, uncommercialized—held sacred for the inspiration, education, health, and enjoyment of generation after generation.

"Throughout the nation this preservation policy is endorsed and supported.

"Yet often some of those who live near one of the great areas dedicated for preservation see —or are persuaded that there is—an opportunity for exploitation which, they argue, should be excused as an exception for just one area which is in their locality.

"So it seems now, with those people of the Upper Colorado River region who favor exploitation of the majestic canyons of Dinosaur National Monument for their reservoirs and power plants . . . who want also the chance to help spend the $206,400,000 (and more) that the federal government would pay for the Dinosaur dam construction.

"The people of this region have been urged so to use these canyons in the National Monument by the federal Bureau of Reclamation, which in its zeal for a stupendous reservoir and power program has emphasized local interests at the expense of the national welfare. These people have been misled.

"It is a sorry story.

"A chain of events has now committed the

LETTERS TO PIONEER ANCESTORS

To Henry Van der Sluyse, 1755-1797

A mixture of gallant and puritan—
Reading your diary leaves me little doubt:
Between the lines of quaint chirography
The truth (at this late date) comes creeping out.
"A man of but few words," historians write,
Though of your actions there is proof in plenty:
Sheriff, Surveyor, and "A loud-mouthed Rebel,"
Before you'd reached the age of two-and-twenty.
Thief of the farmer's hidden meagre store,
You prowled the valley land and mountain gorge,
Trailed by a small disreputable corps,
To feed "some hungry men" at Valley Forge.

And then, a three-day journey for your "pay;"
A night of revelery in Lancaster city:
"I'm strapped again . . . I must search out some hay . . .
The wenches in The Town are mighty pretty . . ."
(A doubt or two of "Ethics" was entailed.)
And so your thoughts upon your homeward way—
Until your everpresent thirst prevailed;
A tavern light cut short your monolog;
Your fingers found a coin—and forthright you
Drowned life, death, ethics in "A quart of grog."

MOMENTS

Moments break like globes of thin glass, celestial
Bubbles, catapulting upon us, surging,
Multicolored, urging us thither, hither,
Hunting us, crowding.

Now in blue sky, gently they lift from windward,
Wandering, drifting, teasing our idle wonder;
Now we feel them, leaping beneath our tired feet,
Lost in spring freshet!

Soft translucent moments enclose and hold us,
Time's brief dew drop bears us ensphered in crystal;
Seraph-faces, stars and the dust of comets
Gleam through the sky curve!

THE BALLERINA

The ballerina ties her shoe,
A gray cat watches from the rain;
Behind the curtains looped in blue
Is seen the castle of Four Kings
Where dwells a princess, leal and true.
In overture a cello sings,
The ballerina ties her shoe.

Like a lean puppet dressed in haste,
Her frock is rumpled, tied askew
The silver ribbons round her waist,
The footlight's glare will make all new
When she spins slowly, apple-faced,
The ballerina ties her shoe.

A dancing doll lost from romance,
The ballerina ties her shoe,
While precious time the music grants
What fancies form her retinue.
With half a sigh, a backward glance,
The ballerina ties her shoe.

New Volumes . . .

The University of California Press, always publishers of [illegible], is again no exception this year with their listings of spring releases. Twelve books on a variety of subject matter are being issued during March and April and there will be some among them that will be of great interest to Carmel readers.

One of them in particular, which, probably, will interest only a limited number of people, is The Dusky-Footed Wood Rat by Jean M. Linsdale and Lloyd P. Tevis, Jr., a record of observations made on the Hastings Natural History Reservation at the upper end of Carmel Valley.

This study is mainly concerned with the life habits of these rodents—why they live where they do and why they move, how they protect themselves against intruders and their response to circumstances brought about by weather conditions and supply or lack of food.

Published early this month was The Rise of Scientific Philosophy by Hans Riechenbach. Mathmatical discoveries in the early nineteenth century cleared the way for scientific philosophy and its rise, according to the author; was furthered by study and knowledge in the fields of physics, chemistry, biology and psychology. The author feels that philosophy is no longer a battle with conflicting opinions, but a science which is slowly discovering the truth.

Amateur photographers will be very interested in Raymond Spottiswoode's Film and Its Techniques, in which he presents the techniques and knowledge required for the taking of documentary films. He writes first about ideas which are suitable, how they are written into an acceptable script, how production units are drawn together, and then takes up the mechanics of the camera itself. Editing, optical printing, film libraries, negative cutting and other relative subjects are taken up in separate chapters and should be of invaluable use to those interested in this subject. All steps of production from script to screen are treated upon in succeeding chapters, dealing with recent advances in both pictures and sound. Spottiswoode has spent 12 years in documentary film production—three years with John Grierson's original group, six years with the National Film Board of Canada and three years in the United States.

Of an entirely different type, and one which will interest the Baker Street Irregulars is The Drood Murder Case by Richard M. Baker. In this, Mr. Baker presents five studies in this famous and unfinished work of Charles Dickens, both interesting and provocative. It is a volume of ingenious literary deduction and provides new answers for the old questions asked by literary detectives for many years. The reader is shown, by actual clues in the story by Dickens, Baker's completion of the plot. He also includes letters Dickens wrote to his family at the time and stories by other writers which Dickens edited for publication. Baker is Master of French at the Kent School in Conneticut.

For gardeners there are two volumes, An Illustrated Manual of California Shrubs and A Manual of the Flowering Plants of California. The first, by Howard E. McMinn, lists about 800 species and 200 varieties of native shrubs, together with 12 species of introduced shrubs that have been naturalized. The author, who is a professor of botany at Mills College, also includes information on biology, cultivation and distribution.

The second is a reprint of a book which for 25 years has been used as a guide by lovers of California wildflowers and for thousands of students. Jepson was the principal interpreter of California flora as well as one of the greatest of all the regional botanists. In this volume, there is a glossary and a general index of plants names.

Other titles include: Nineteenth Century Fiction by Michael Sadleir; English Riddles from Oral Tradition by Archer Taylor; An Index of Mediaeval Studies Published in Festschriften by

Everybody Had A Good Time At The Wharf Theatre Reopening With Very Funny Cradle Snatchers

BY ERICA FRANKE

The Wharf Theater came to life again last Friday evening with the Wharf Players production of The Cradle Snatchers, a comedy of life and times in the roaring twenties. All the familiar sounds of lapping water, distant bells and sleepy sea gulls faded magically away as the curtain rose on a riotous charleston, danced by Dorothy Dean and Dick Nordt, setting the mood for the play. A capacity audience welcomed the company wih the sort of warm enthusiasm that directors dream about, and the actors responded with an inspired performance.

A harmless little tale of three wives who, disconsolate at the ever increasing frequency of their husband's hunting trips, decide to teach them a lesson by hiring three college boys as gigolos. Cradle Snatchers is probably fun nier now than it was in 1925. Time has lent it an aura. While the current production makes the most of the satiric possibilities of the dress and manners of the period, it is satire with a trace of nostalgia. Under Dan Totheroh's intelligent direction, the bejewelled matrons and flamboyant flappers are treated with an understanding that transcends mockery, and the tempo is sustained with the precision of a fast game of ping pong.

Marvellously costumed in long waisted, short skirted dresses, dripping with beads and fringes, Ruth McElroy, Betty Fowlston and Helen Silvani play the irate wives. Ruth McElroy is a perfect actress. Within the performer interpreting her part is a second self with a delightful sense of conspiracy with the audience. She has a way of intimating, without a visible sign, that all this is no surprise to either of you, that you and she are partners in enjoying what she is doing. And of course what she does is superb. Ruthie tenderly waving an ostrich feather fan, Ruthie doing a Spanish dance to the tune of Yes Sir, That's My Baby, Ruthie opening her eyes and mouth wide to deliver, sweetly cadenced, the inevitable mot juste. She is, in this trio of graces, at once the trouble maker and the incurable romantic, the triumphant disillusionment of her curtain speech is one of the high points of the play.

Betty Fowlston's Ethel is the Juno of the piece. Large, matronly and a trifle rakish she uses her every gesture, her face, her silhouette to convey comedy. Perhaps her finest scene comes when she is left alone with her nervous cavalier who has been busily scribbling away in a corner and now proceeds to read, through clenched teeth, the amorous speeches he thinks she expects, from a note book concealed in his palm. When he carelessly forgets it and she picks it up and begins to read, and to laugh, turns and slaps his face sharply and goes on reading and laughing, the house simply comes down.

Helen Silvani, as Kitty, reproduces perfectly the unbelievably boyish emaciated figure one remembers from New Yorker cartoons of the fashionable woman of the twenties. Her elaborately casual stance, drooping wrists and expression of fevered gaiety are admirable.

Playing the mercenary college boys who are a little overwhelmed by their frivolous employers, Jim Madden as the self assured Henry and Burt Minkin as the timorous Oscar are both wonderful, and Alex Olivetti stops the show with his brilliant performance as Jose Vallejo, the ukelele playing Spaniard from Brooklyn.

The tweed wearing, duck hunting husbands are amusingly played by Bruce Ariss, John Craig and Terry Eby, who warrants special praise for stepping into his role on one day's notice, his usual poise quite unruffled.

Wanda Rhodes, Betty Rambeau and Lois Ann McGregor are the flappers the husbands bring home, and my only compaint concerns the entrance of these young ladies whose first appearance should come as a shock but who ambled in casually and almost unnoticed. This is a matter for the director. The alert Mr. Totheroh has probably attended to it already. I doubt if much escapes him.

Myrtlerose Craig is pretty enough as the sweet young thing who plays chaperone and Adele Craig does a delightfully muddled maid whose appearance, trucking across the stage in the dance scene, is unforgettable.

Last Friday night was icy but a new heating system kept the theater pleasantly warm and at the intermission, the audience trooped over to the Blair Studios to drink coffee and examine the current showing of oils and water colors by Margaret Millard and Jack Case. A delightful evening all in all and the company, Mr. Totheroh and the technical staff of the Wharf Theater are to be congratulated for their polished performance and for the infectious spirit of fun in which the audience participates, making the words "Community theater" a reality.

United States Department of the Interior to the exploitation of one of the most superb of all the areas that the nation has entrusted to its guardianship.

"A sorry story, indeed, for it must now be climaxed by a rebuke from all the conservation-minded people of the nation to a conservation-minded Secretary of the Interior who is in the extraordinary position of sponsoring the destruction of an area for which, by law, he is the guardian.

"The people of America must themselves write the ending to this story.

"You can help. You can write to your Congressman and to your Senators. You can write them to delete Echo Park and Split Mountain from any bills authorizing dams, and furthermore to advocate an amendment to protect our national park system from all such invasions.

"Congress should reaffirm the sanctity of the areas the Nation is preserving and should prohibit the use of any water development funds for dams or other engineering works inside the Dinosaur Monument.

Re-routing Long Distance circuits—one of the many interesting, vital jobs for women in the telephone business.

THE GIRLS BEHIND EACH TELEPHONE "HELLO"

Theirs are important jobs—and they do them well

1. Here's one business where the spotlight's really on women. Because of the nature of telephone work, nearly two out of every three telephone people are women—a high percentage. And they must be capable, well-trained women to handle your calls efficiently and serve you well in our offices. We train them, at our expense of course. And they earn good money in this important work.

2. Practically every sort of job—from accounting to teaching—can be found in our business. In addition to good pay, the girls have the security of the company-paid Benefit Plan and enjoy holidays and vacations with pay. All know they have a good chance to advance as their ability grows. Perhaps the best evidence of the importance of women to us is that hundreds have management jobs.

3. It would be hard to imagine work for women today more important than a job in our nation's telephone service. For now, more than ever, our country needs swift, reliable communications to help speed the job of defense. And it's reassuring to know that in these days of high prices on most everything, you still get a bargain when you buy telephone service. Here in the West, on the average, telephone rates are up less than half as much as the cost of living.

Fashion Show Very Springy

The spring fashion show sponsored by the Harriet Duncan shop at the Pine Inn Wednesday was accompanied by the most marvelous burst of weather which has hit the Peninsula in many a day, and hordes of gaily-dressed and happily chatting women turned out for the affair.

With Harriet Duncan at the microphone (dressed in a fashionable two-toned spring outfit) everything seemed gay and sparkling as the attractive models wended their way into the dining room and made their turns around the various tables . . . Motif of the show was Invitation to Spring, and Phyllis Carter, the first model to appear, exemplified it glowingly in a lilac topper over a mauve blouse and flannel skirt tied together by one of those handsome handmade belts.

Separates are featured at the Harriet Duncan Shop, and the total effect, when put together by such a practised hand as Miss Duncan's, is not only pleasing and harmonious but unusually distinctive.

We liked a soft suit in pink beige that Mrs. Willard Whitney wore. Accent was on the silhouette, one of the new French ideas. And for "champagne and caviar" Shelagh Scoville appeared in a beige suit which again stressed the French feeling. Flowers, by the way, were furnished by Mrs. Nielsen of the NB Flower Shop, and she chose violets to go with the beige suit. (Sleeves were three-quarter length and worn with long white gloves. Very chic.)

Mrs. Jack Dalziel, whom Miss Duncan announced as "our Mrs. Exeter" was modish and distinctive with her lovely white hair in a costume of pure silk faille. Beige again was the color and on her hair she wore instead of a hat the new spring veil, with a flower behind. Shoes and bag were furnished by the Village Shoe Tree.

Teen-ager Barbara May appeared in an imported tweed jacket (lime and gray, very unusual) over a smart, high-collared blouse and skirt.

Shirley Clegg in a cool gray cotton with a tangerine belt and tangerine sweater looked ready for any occasion, and very, very intriguing indeed was Shelagh Scoville as a "summer siren" in a black skirt and blouse with a white jacket over it . . . Tiny white buttons on the skirt.

Another intriguing teen-age costume was a red and white crisscross T-shirt worn with red sailcloth shorts and a big red sailcloth umbrella. Wonderful for the beach or taking a dog for a walk.

Dale Dawson wore shorts made in Paris with a crisp white blouse and a navy sweater. The shorts were a tiny check, nicely tailored.

And something new for spring garden parties . . . going back to grandma's era with an old-fashioned broomstick dress. Had lots of ruffles, very frou frou across the top, and looked as though it would be fun to wear. (Nice thing about broomstick dresses is they never have to be starched or ironed; just hang 'em out on a broomstick.)

Tangerine is one of the color-notes this spring, and Shirley Clegg was very attractive in a French Lido tangerine blouse which was worn with a plaid skirt.

An elegant spring straw hat furnished by the Hour Glass was worn by Mrs. Jack Dalziel along with a very, very handsome tailored dress in fine check. Not only elegant for spring but elegant period. Could be worn any place, any time.

Other models were Joan Kempen, Lois Whetstone, Mrs. Dale Schermerhorn, and Margaret Luker.

Altogether, the spring-wear shown by the Harriet Duncan shop seemed to set an intoxicant (and at the same time chic and tailored) mood for the season that is at last upon us.

Plantsmith Speaker

The next meeting of the Monterey Peninsula Garden Club will be held at the Pacific Grove Civic Club house tonight at 8 o'clock.

"Plantsmith" of Palo Alto will speak on rare and unusual plants which can be raised successfully in this part of the country, many of them of the little amaryllis and geranium families. He will illustrate his talk with colored slides furnished by the National Council of Garden Clubs, entitled Rock Mountain Regional Slides.

"Plantsmith" lived in Carmel from 1929 to 1942, and is now in the bio-chemistry department at Stanford University. This should be a very interesting meeting, and guests are admitted at a nominal fee.

Lions Club Show

"There's Nothing Like a Dame," proclaimed the Sailor Sextet, with gestures, and everybody agreed with them at the Lions Club Fashion Show Saturday night, judging by the reception accorded the lovely women who strutted the runway, modeling everything from play suits to party dresses.

Interspersed with the fashion show were vaudeville skits, announced by Lloyd Weer. Diana Horn, Sally Holt and Charity Rigsby were hits with their pantomine numbers; Jackie Briggs and Shirley Timbers did a novel and amusing dance routine. Jan Bruno, five years old, and Amy Luce, not much his senior performed together, Amy singing and dancing, Jan astonishing everybody with his skill with the drums. Freeman Sargent injected an element of high art in the program with his monologues, and the Sailor Sextet: Dr. William F. Coughlin, Michael Balazs, Floyd Smith, Lewis Poulos Ted Fehring and Col. Roy Hillyer, closed the show.

As is the custom with these annual Lion affairs, the banquet hall was packed to the ceiling, everybody had a wonderful time and nobody would go home, but danced until all hours to Stoney's orchestra.

Shops participating were: Harriet Duncan, The Cinderella Shop, Gladys McCloud Teen Age Shop, Branson's, The Hour Glass Shop, Gail Coupe Shop, the Carmel Dress Shop, Jack and Jill, the Carmel Kiddie Shop, Balzer's, Robert Kirk, Ltd., Putnam and Raggett, Lanz, Kramer's, The Silver Thimble, The Banbox, The Country Shop and Lynn's, Ltd.

The attractive models, announced by Mrs. Edith Morrison, were Harriet Adams Shearer, Joanne Nix, Vera Watts, Della Lou McCreary, Deborah Geering, Margaret Parkhurst, Kathleen Whittaker, Helen Prosser, Janine Johnston, Vee Vee Erion, Lynn Tomlinson, Mrs. Don Mantarro, Judy Ann Mantarro, Sylvia Lyon, Charlotte Langhof, Carol Templeman, Donna Caruso, Rose Gossler, Jeanne Ewing, Mrs. Howard Lockwood, Kathleen Whittaker, Bonne Wager, Dale Dawson, and Carol Templeman. Male models were David Bates, Peter Newell, Myron Branson, and Dick Sumner.

Shoes were displayed by the Village Shoe Tree and Guild Shop.

Alberta Dreyer Wed

Married Sunday afternoon in the Church of the Wayfarer were Alberta Dreyer and Lynn Brooks. Dr. K. Fillmore Gray performed the ceremony in front of the altar which was banked with masses of white stock and pink carnations.

The motif of the ceremony was pink and white.

The bride, who owns the Handcraft Cottage on Dolores Street, wore a 100-year-old gown of a deep rose-color which originally came from France and was lent to her by Mrs. Carl Van Saltza for the occasion. On her head was a halo hat with flowers around it and an illusion veil. She carried an enchanting muff, created for her especially by Mrs. Noel Arnold of Pebble Beach, of pink quilted silk, tulle and nylon netting, covered with white gardenias.

Mrs. Carl van Saltza was the marton-of-honor and she appeared in a full-length gown of pink chiffon, and a picture-hat. Her bouquet was of deep pink roses.

The bride was given in marriage by Noel T. Arnold of Pebble Beach, and Carl van Saltza was the best man.

Following the wedding, there was a gala reception at the Noel T. Arnold residence in Pebble Beach where champagne was served and numerous toasts proposed to the bride and groom. The table was decorated with flowers from Mrs. Arnold's garden, again carrying out the pink and white motif.

During the course of the afternoon, the entire wedding party went out on the lawn to take motion-pictures of the affair.

The new Mrs. Brooks, who came to Carmel six years ago from Kansas City, Kansas, is a graduate of Baker University. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Dreyer of Kansas City.

The groom, who also comes from Kansas City, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Brooks and a graduate of the Conservatory of Music in Kansas City. They met while in Kansas and their wedding Sunday was the culmination of a long romance which began in school.

Mr. Brooks is employed at present with the Customer Service for Sears in Salinas, and the young couple plan to live in Del Rey Woods. They will go to Seattle March 25 for a two weeks' honeymoon.

Lt. Dougherty Gets The Distinguished Flying Cross

First Lieutenant William P. Dougherty of Carmel has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross, according to a dispatch received here this week. The presentation was made by Major General Earle E. Partridge, commanding general of the Fifth Air Force, in a ceremony beside Dougherty's jet plane on the flight line of an advanced United Nations air base in southern Japan.

The citation read in part:

". . . On 15 July, 1950, First Lieutenant William P. Dougherty displayed extraordinary courage, skill, and aggressiveness, and gave distinguished support to his flight on a mission involving air to ground support.

"Lieutenant Dougherty accompanied his flight, under adverse weather conditions, to a target in the area of Nasung-ni, Korea, where they attacked an enemy column attempting to cross the Kum River. Despite the intense small arms and automatic weapons fire encountered, he continued to press the attack destroying a tank and two other vehicles."

Dougherty has flown over 150 combat strikes against the enemy in Korea which gives him the distinction of being the top pilot in the Eighth Fighter Wing. He is presently serving as base operations officer, a job responsible for keeping the huge amount of air traffic coming and going smoothly.

SNOW TALK

Once when we were in the snow, we had a tobogan and when we were going down my friend and I tumbled right off in the snow.

—Deborah Hammond

When I was in the snow a long time ago, I made a snow man and he kept falling down and I got real mad and so I fell in the snowman.—Linda McHarry.

Once when we went up in the snow, I built a snowman. I got up at the top of the hill with my skiis. I was determined to ski through him but I caught him on me as I went by and he went down with me on the skiis.

—John Eagbton

A long time ago when me and my little sis went out in the snow, my mother made a snow man and the next morning, my baby sis went outside and crashed right into the snow man.—Robert Hein.

Once when I lived in Rosedale we went outside and made a snow man. We looked and looked for cans. We found two and used them for eyes. Then it was too cold and we had to go inside and my uncle, you know what he did? He brushed us off with a broom and it felt funny.—Mary McCool.

EASTER RHYMES

One there was a bunny,
As happy as can be.
He was really quite funny,
As anyone can see.

—Anne Putnam

I have an Easter bunny,
And he is very funny.
He might play with my dice,
and help the cats catch the mice.

He might paint his legs,
While he paints my Easter eggs.
I want a red and blue one,
He must be having fun.

—Durell Decker

He was very happy and gay,
Because it was on Easter Day.
As I was looking about,
He started to find a hideout.

I said it was perfectly O. K.
Old fellow, old boy I say.
I won't hurt you ar harm you in any way.
Well after that he ran away.

—Carla Budd

When Easter comes I'm bright and gay,
I wish it would come almost every day.
I feel like shouting way out loud,
I feel like I'm floating right up on a cloud.

I flew to the window from out of my bed,
And the Easter bunnies' coats had all turned red.
I found the eggs in the wierdest places,
Mommie even found one in her very best laces.
Daddy found one on a hot cross bun,
That is why I think Easter is fun.

—Hilary Teague

I woke up Easter morning,
And looked out on the lawn.
And I saw the Easter bunny,
Painting eggs just at dawn.

When he was painting Easter eggs,
He spilled some on his little white legs.
When he tried to wipe it off,
It made him cough and cough.

SOLUTIONS TO PROBLEMS IN CAFETERIA

Today when we were lining up at noon to go in to lunch I had to tell one person to go back to his seat.—David Chamberlain.

When you line up for lunch you should be quiet, then you won't have to go back to your seat and wait for 5 or 10 minutes.

—Barbara Petty

We shouldn't talk in the cafeteria loudly because if one person talks the whole group starts talking and yelling. If the second graders make a lot of noise the first graders will, too. We should keep quiet to let them learn.

—Victor Langdon

Mrs. Anderson and Mrs. Sieve work hard. It's not nice to say we don't like something in the lunch. It is unfair to Mrs. Anderson . . . she's kind to all the children.

—Sally Campbell

Our talking in line disturbs Mrs. Anderson. —Gerald Aiers

If they talk too loud at their tables in the cafeteria they should have one warning and then be sent to the class meeting of the fourth grade.—Jean Harrah.

In the lunch line I'm hostess. If there is too much noise I give one warning every time.

—Dolly Paredes

I think instead of holding up everybody the person making the noise should be the only one held up.—Tommy Layton.

If they keep talking and talking we can send them in to eat with the fourth grade for a week.

—Bartley Blout

The first thing is if they don't eat all the food Mrs. Anderson will be wasting money and food.

—Diane Abbott

Jean's idea is good, send them in to the fourth grade teacher because today we were making too much noise.—Judy Leslie.

If we eat lunch in the cafeteria we should show Mrs. Anderson our respect and set an example for the first grade.—Joan Willicombe.

Mrs. Anderson is trying to prepare, make, very good lunches. If they weren't good lunches, she wouldn't prepare them for you.

Increased Services Planned By SPCA

By Harriet Roberts

The March meeting of the board of directors of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals took place in the Monterey Council Chambers on Friday last, March 9. Mr. Noel Sullivan, president, returned only the day before from a three month's trip to Europe, was in the chair. Ten of the eleven directors were present. They included Miss Marjorie Fontana, vice president, Mrs. Christine Raynsford, secretary, Mr. Clyde Dorsey, treasurer, Lady Kinnoull, Mrs. Mort Henderson, Dr. MacDougal, Mr. King Mederos, Col. Shelburn Robison and Dr. Ralph Weston.

After an interesting discussion of free speech versus loyalty, Mr. Clyde Dorsey summed up by stating that a board of directors was an elected body, there were bound to be differences of opinion, the majority vote must, in democratic practice, decide the society's policy, but the proper thing for those in disagreement was to submit a minority report. Such a report could be submitted now. None was forthcoming.

Mr. Mederos gave the report of the humane officer. The members were grieved to hear that goat rodeos were given, in which the goats were sometimes hurt by the hooves of the horses. The difficulty of dogs who trespass and do harm to livestock was considered.

Dr. Weston reported that Private Floyd O. Humeston and his partner had as yet made no payments to the SPCA for expenses incurred building a run, etc., for Pagan, their lion, which the SPCA housed for them on an agreement that they should feed and care for it and repay the SPCA for extra expenses incurred by them.

ANDREW HUGHES HONORED

In recognition of his long service as president of the Monterey County Trust and Savings Bank, Andrew C. Hughes of Carmel was honored by the directors of the bank with a dinner at the Pine Inn Friday night.

Senator E. H. Tickle, who presided, presented Mr. Hughes with an engraved tribute which had been signed by the directors.

BUSINESS GROUP TO STUDY PARKING PROBLEMS

The Carmel Business Association will make a close study of the parking problem this year it was announced by President Thomas S. Elston, Jr., at the quarterly meeting Monday night. The parking problem has become increasingly grave, he pointed out, and the association hopes to work out some sort of solution.

Three possible methods of solving it were suggested by Paul McKinstry; off-the-street parking areas to be purchased by the city; the lease of parking lots by the city or by the Carmel Business Association; and parking meters.

Patricia Cunningham, scheduled to speak on art at the meeting, postponed her talk because of the length of the discussion on the parking question. She will give her talk at a later meeting.

Public Invited To Requiem At Mission Sunday

The Requiem Mass in C Minor by Luigi Cherubini will be performed at the Carmel Mission Palm Sunday, March 18, at 8 p.m., by the Monterey Peninsula College Chorus. The concert is open to the public and is free, according to an announcement made this week by Dr. Harvey Marshall, director of the chorus.

Although the Mass was intended originally as a Catholic service, it is to be presented as a musical masterwork in concert form commemorating the death of Christ. Mrs. Donald Witmer will accompany the chorus at the organ.

The program includes the organ prelude, Komm Susser Tod, by Bach, Vexilla Regis (Hymn to the Cross) by Venantius Fortunatus, Commentarium by Earl Akin, and the Requiem Mass in C Minor by Cherubini. The Mass is in six sections: Introit and Kyrie, Graduale, Dies Irae, Offertorium, Sanctus and Benedictus, and Pie Jesu.

Della Schmaus will be the soprano soloist and George Little the baritone soloist.

The chorus was granted the priviledge of performing the Mass from the Sanctuary of the historic chapel. "We are deeply indebted to Father O'Connell of the Carmel Mission for granting us this privilege," Dr. Marshall said.
